Theresa's final script

INT. FH. BUILDING B HALL. DAY

Right at the middle of St. Pölten's University of Applied Sciences' main hall a woman sits on a chair, THERESA, 19.
She holds a folded walking cane as she addresses someone in front of her.

                    THERESA
          Hello, I'm Theresa. I'm 19 years old and I'm currently studying media technology at Sankt Pölten's University. However, I'm actually legally blind.

She raises her hand and shows her cane.

                    THERESA
          I've been losing sight since I was 16. As of now I can only see a big blur and some vague shadows.

A POV of Theresa's sight is shown.

                    THERESA (V.O)
          It's like all detail has been erased from my sight. I can sort of tell my surroundings, but not faces
          or detailed shapes.

                    THERESA
          The fact that I have a disability
          sometimes makes people act as if I'm a child. And yet they also forget that I don't perceive the world exactly like them.

EXT. CROSSWALK. DAY

Theresa is about to cross the street when someone tries to grab her.

                    THERESA (V.O)
          Imagine you are just getting through your day and some stranger
          just grabs you unprompted.

She gets startled and shakes the guy off.

                    THERESA (V.O)
          That would be weird, right? Well, something like that happens to me
          every week when I'm trying to cross
          the street.

INT. KITCHEN. DAY

Theresa is having a drink.

>   THERESA (V.O)
>   And there are even more situations
>   when people sneak up on me. Like >   I'm minding my own thinking I'm all >   alone and someone just appears.

Someone goes next to her, touches her and she gets startled.

INT. FH. BUILDING B HALL. DAY

She keeps talking calmly.

>   THERESA
>   Still, I don't let all that to ruin
>   my life, I trust my instincts.
>   Neither I let my fears to define >   who I am. I have hobbies and >   passions. Music is my love, that's >   why I ended up here at the >   university.

>   THERESA
>   I love composing and playing music,
>   and I'm proud to say that I can >   play a couple of instruments.

She changes her posture slightly and turns her head to the camera.

>   THERESA
>   What about you? Do you want to see >   the world through my eyes? Then put >   on these glasses and let's see how >   you do it!
